

Students - READINESS

READINESS

- the prior learning that students bring to a new concept

Readiness varies for each of us whenever we are learning something new. If we have some prior knowledge, some point of connection, or even simply a positive feeling about the new material, we are in a better position to learn than if we are lacking in these.

Some ways to determine student readiness include pre-assessments (diagnostic), checklists, brainstorming, mind maps, exit cards and anticipation guides.

To gauge student readiness, consider:

prior knowledge

current skills

Learning Skills development

prior experiences